Field of the Invention This invention relates to a longitudinally extending support sleeve which may be fabricated from a plurality of extruded laminar elements welded to one another and, more particularly, to a longitudinally extending support sleeve which is useful as a large diameter flange on a wheel mount to mount a vehicle wheel on a vehicle such as a trailer truck. 2. Description of the Related Art In the construction of large diameter wheel mounts, such as that found on a trailer truck wheel, it is important that the wheel mount provide a strong, rigid attachment for the wheel. This is especially true in the construction of large diameter trailer truck wheels and trailers which are generally constructed of multiple tires. In such multiple tire constructions, a wheel mount which is rigid and durable is essential to the overall stability of the trailer. In the wheel mount market, there is an ever increasing desire to make the wheel mount more difficult to physically destroy and that is a factor in the structural configuration of the wheel mount. That is, the wheel mount and the rod and socket areas are essentially one large portion. This makes wheel mounts of this nature heavier than they should be. Additionally, the wheel mount is difficult to manufacture from casting or molding. Further, wheel mounts of this nature are relatively difficult to repair when a socket becomes damaged. A wheel mount of this nature also makes for an undesirable
