I'm using the mail module in the Google App Engine, I have an email field that allows user to enter one or more email addresses. What I want to do is to validate that the email addresses that the user entered is valid. What I want is that the email addresses that user entered that matches some name and number. for example: myname_mynumber@gmail.com is valid, myname@gmail.com, myname@gmail.com not is valid. something like this. A: How about this code? First, I have retrieved all the user's mail addresses. user_emails = getUserEmails(User.get_current_user()) user_emails = user_emails[0:10] Then, I have retrieved the first element of user_emails. The first element of user_emails contains a tuple of '(name, number)' in which name is the user's name and number is the user's number. user_name = user_emails[0][0] user_number = user_emails[0][1] The user_name and user_number are the user's name and number. And, finally, the regex to validate users' mail addresses. '^' + user_name + '.' + user_number + '@gmail.com'$ Q: How to get an array from the netmajortask class with jni How to get an array from the netmajortask class with jni?
