======================= Decent Interface ======================= Does not jump at you Ease of Use ======================= Ease of Use 3/10 Theme ======================= 3/10 Easy to use The interface comes with the option to share a specific window or the entire desktop and share it with one or more participants. The guest can also be invited by email and the URL can be copied for faster sharing. Once the other participants joins, you can decide whether to share everything or only one active window by simply selecting a checkbox, which is great when you have just one or two active windows in order to save some space. A few extra options let you toggle between regular and mini mode, pause and end the streaming while sharing the picture and more. All in all, we have found that the app does not include any extra features other than streaming and sharing. Unfortunately, there is no way to screenshot the other participants in the room. AirCalc is a handy calculator for your business or personal life which enables you to make calculations in the Microsoft Office, spreadsheet, database or other application. The package contains several calculators, one of which will assist you in calculating the number of sales representatives needed for a certain number of product lines. Should also include a template for a project proposal. Its interface is plain and simple, enabling you to easily use it. Set up your statistics Description AirCalc is a free calculator software that enables you to make Microsoft Office or Excel calculations in the project proposal template. The software can be downloaded either in the Zip file or as a standalone installer. It enables you to calculate tables, graphs, functions and areas and enable you to customize the results. Also, the software calculates the number of employees needed in order to sell 100 units. This feature can prove useful when planning to open a new business. The application is a product of the well-known company "TopSoft". The newly released video editor, Pinnacle Pro X2, offers two new features that are arguably worth mentioning. While the ability to add and remove keyframes, an added feature to the video timeline, is something that any videographer would appreciate, the advanced color grading features are likely to be of more use to professional shooters. In this article we will be looking at some of the new features, as well as how you can make use of them. For the color grading features, the application was developed by Pinnacle, with the intention of producing higher end results than most editing software on the market. Color Grading Create fancy colour grading effects with Pinnacle Pro X2 The ability to have unlimited keyframes in the image timeline does produce a little lag in the software, but this is only something that anyone with an intermediate level of expertise would have known already. From the Pinnacle website, we know that you can import with all kinds of functions, so it doesn't appear as if it is an issue. Pinnacle Pro X2 also features a color grading feature that is suited for those who are looking to create more professional looking works. The imported images can be edited with one of three effects on video. These include Highlights and Contrast, Alter Light and Contrast and Colour D50. The end result is comparable to other editing software, however you need to use the Pinnacle Pro X2 software's unique features in order to benefit from its advanced colour grading effects. The first way in which you can achieve this is by using the Colour D50 effect. Using this effect, you can easily adjust the colour balance of your images. You can also set the intensity levels of each colour you choose. The result here is a realistic, everyday looking image, however it isn't a subtle one. The best results are often with those who are using a pre-production shot, so that the color grading effect is not too noticeable. The results are not as good when using the other effects, although we think that the Alter Light and Contrast effect might be worth trying. When using this effect, you can modify the strength of individual colours within the image, and make it appear either lighter or darker. When you are in need of a more advanced colour grading effect, you can choose the Highlight and Contrast effect. Like the Alter Light and Contrast effect, the Highlight and Contrast effect allows you to modify the strength of colours within the image. However, unlike the previous two effects 6a5afdab4c
