How To Prevent Identity Theft

Identity theft is a crime where a criminal uses your personal information to commit fraud, steal from you and hurt you. Identity thieves often use this stolen personal information to open up credit cards or loans in your name. These are called fraudulent credit applications. Once this happens, you are left with a debt that you may not be able to pay. How can you prevent identity theft? This e-book will teach you ways to prevent identity theft and keep your information safe.

Description Identifying Victims You can tell if your identity has been stolen when you find out about it, your credit report is being pulled, or your mail has been delivered to the wrong address. When an application for credit or a loan is approved, rejected or put on hold, you may learn that your Social Security number has been stolen and is being used by someone else.

How to Catch Identity Thieves Once you identify your identity has been stolen, there are steps you can take to help the police identify the thief and prevent him from committing more crimes. You can also make sure that the information you report is accurate, so it is easy for you to provide if asked to do so by the police.

How to Help the Police If the thief commits a crime, the police will be able to help the victim. When the victim contacts the police with the information that has been stolen, the police will run a report with the victim's information. The police will also take steps to help catch the identity thief.

How to Handle Identity Theft If you have experienced identity theft, it is important that you learn what actions to take. In this section you'll find advice about coping with identity theft, how to file a police report, and tips on how to begin rebuilding your reputation and credit.

Making Changes You can change your financial and personal information to make it less accessible to identity thieves. You can use a credit report to find out what companies are asking you for your personal information. After you learn what information a company wants, you can take steps to reduce the risk of becoming a victim of identity theft.

Getting Help If you need help after you've been victimized, you can contact the federal government. It has resources for victims of identity theft. You can also contact the police and report your identity theft. If you think your identity has been stolen, you can also contact your local U.S. postal office.

"How To Prevent Identity Theft-Print FREE" How to Prevent Identity Theft How To Prevent Identity Theft How to Prevent Identity Theft-FREE eBook "How To Prevent Identity Theft-Print FREE" Actions More... Last week I made a decision to finally accept my identity as an expert in identity theft prevention. The decision to start providing online training, coaching and information services as an expert in the field of identity theft, occurred over time. Today I'm proud to announce the official launch of my new identity as an expert in identity theft prevention. There are certain elements of who I am, that I've not been able to share. There was a part of me that fought the desire to put it all out there, but after so many phone calls and emails, I decided I couldn't ignore the truth any longer. I'm going to work hard to live up to the trust that you have in me. And, I'll continue to serve you in whatever capacity I can, in any way that I can. As a lead expert in identity theft prevention, my goal is to make you aware of the people and crimes that I find most threatening to you. By giving you the best information and advice, I know you'll be protected. When you combine my years of experience as an identity theft investigator with the knowledge and skills I've developed through self-improvement and other related online programs, I'm sure that you'll agree I'm one of the best you can find. This is what I'm going to do. It's easy to see how often fraud is covered in the news. It's a nasty business. I'm sure you've seen the headlines on the nightly news, seen the stories on the Internet, and heard the commercials in the morning news. I want to make sure that you know that fraud is a problem not just in the news, but also in your life. My family and I have been the victims of identity theft. My wife's and son's credit card number was stolen in 2004. Two months later we had to cancel the cards as we didn't know how the criminals had used them.
