- Free - Useful - All files saved with ODS format - Easy to use - Merges ODS files into one file - Saves all previous formattingIt's May and, as always, we are looking at the top ten prospects in the minor league. Our top ten prospects is different this season. That is because five of the ten prospects that made last year's list have reached the Major Leagues. That means that we can give an extra special edition to the top ten prospects. So, what are the top ten prospects in the minor leagues, as of June 5th? After looking at the list and thinking about the names on it, we will tell you who we feel are the best prospects in the minor leagues. Call it the First Grader. 1. Jose Berrios, RHP, Twins (on the 40-man roster): The Twins won't be happy with the Indians stealing Berrios in the Rule 5 Draft. However, they wouldn't want the 22 year old pitcher as part of their future plans, anyway. After a dominant season in 2014, Berrios might have the highest ceiling of any pitcher on the list. He features an excellent fastball, a curveball that is unhittable, and a changeup that is dropping off. He may only have 20 innings in the States, but when he is in the States, you better watch out. He has a chance to be the best pitcher in Minnesota before the 2016 season ends. If he isn't, it will be a very short winter in Minneapolis. 2. Francisco Liriano, RHP, Twins (on the 40-man roster): The Twins acquired Liriano in the trade that sent Josh Willingham to the White Sox. The right-hander is on the Twins 40-man roster. It is a bit of a surprise that he is listed this high on the list considering that Liriano is coming off shoulder surgery. The Twins hope that Liriano can return to his career best season. He could become the staff ace that the Twins have lacked for years. 3. Byron Buxton, OF, Twins (on the 40-man roster): The Twins are making a lot of noise in the free agent market and will likely sign Jacoby Ellsbury. The fact that they feel Buxton is ready to hit in the big leagues bodes well
