When I woke up, it was already nighttime. Moonlight was pouring in through the window. I felt cold and yawned. I got up, pulled on my pants, opened the window, and breathed in the fresh night air. Night was always my favorite time of day; when I was on my own, when there was no whining and whining crowd, no need to look at the clock and wait until it was time to go to bed. I yawned again, made my way to the kitchen, drank some cold water.
