MIPS Firmware Platforms - Apr 4, 2016 Generic BIOS Extensions - BIOS Manage-ment page 77 Oct 4, 2010 When I pressed it the system took a few seconds to start up.. I looked at the BIOS and saw the power supply was at 100%.. it was good so i restarted.. At that point it brought me to a black screen with the two same words showing up over and over again... I changed the power supply to the alternate.. It worked then.. So i restarted it again and then it shut down after 5 minutes of working..... So i restarted it again and it did the same thing.. I then attempted to load Windows XP into CD drive and let it load it as i was reading a book on a Kindle Fire. I shut the power off and turned it back on and now it is booting up fine but not showing anything on the screen. After I turn the power off and then back on I lose the desktop completely. How to Enable the BIOS Boot Menu?Q: How does install.packages install a package to a hidden folder in RStudio? I have checked for a solution to my problem for a long time and it seems I was lucky to find it here. I have an R script that currently runs just fine locally (install.packages function) and on a remote server (by just copying the file). My problem is that locally I get the error cannot open data part of path /somepath/newfolder/ and the Rstudio automaticaly creates a hidden folder in the same folder as my R script. This is not a problem locally, but in a remote server I do not know how to configure this. I have tried googling the problem for a long time now and most of the answers that seems to work for others I do not seem to work for me. I found a post on this topic (R: check if a package can be installed?) that is related to my problem, but it was not very helpful to me. I do not know how to edit my question, so please, if something is not clear enough or I did not ask anything that was needed feel free to comment and 3da54e8ca3
