Transistor Equivalent Book Free Download PdfQ: Making a hyphen disappear from an edit in the review queue In the daily Graphic Design review queue, I get the "This edit is too minor; can you suggest an edit?" notification for this answer, which currently reads: I would like to update the quote (which no longer actually takes place in the post - the quote has been used on a quite different post, but the answer was originally added in reference to it). Is there a way of making a hyphen appear in the post after a review, but still having the notification appear? A: No, the - appears in the post only because it was edited, but is not actually part of the post content anymore, so it shows in the review interface and the answers review interface. If you had rolled back the edit that inserted the original quote, the hyphen would be removed after your review, since that's what you actually reverted. A: Yep, as others have mentioned you can remove the hyphen manually from the post in the post edits screen. Q: Can't sign up for PayPal on my website if I'm not using their credit card I've been asked to integrate a payment system on my website. The payment system accepts credit cards (I checked that). However, I can't use my PayPal account (I tried logging in using my email). I have "Buy with PayPal" option in my site. If I enter credit card, everything is fine. However if I choose PayPal it does nothing. Please help A: If you are talking about the button or linking within the content to use Paypal, then this is only an input for the credit card. If you are talking about integrating your own Paypal account within your website then you will need to create the environment to receive all the data related to the customer. For one, no one is gonna believe you if you say you have 3.7k people on your facebook page. You need to add some reality here. We were there for the e24f408de9
