Some reflections on English and capital: Craig Sauer's response to Pennikocic net nuggets English for Business Studies : course for business. Making decisions, . The author of the book, Craig Sauer, writes that these days, in his opinion, it is "unthinkable" to teach foreign students in business schools "in English." He believes that most business school graduates do not speak English for one reason only - "because they do not understand how they learn a foreign language." Sauer gives several reasons why this is happening, and suggests solutions to the problem. "Don't speak English" - "Don't speak Russian" - "Don't speak German".
