Five Reasons Your Job Is Killing You I've been working at my current position for a few months now, and I have really observed some major changes in my body. I'm no longer as happy, as physically free as I was a few months ago when I started here. I even noticed that a few months ago, I was able to quit a cigarette without any sort of internal struggle, whereas I now go through such intense anxiety that I almost can't put my hand to my throat without feeling physically ill. My hands shake when I do, and it makes work really difficult. I do have anxiety issues, but I've never had that intense of an experience before. So, I want to explore why my job is killing my body. I've come to the conclusion that my job is making me physically ill because the environment is unnatural for me. Like any workplace, ours has its own set of demands. I've been here longer than I've been with any other employer, and I can honestly say that I've never been happier. Yet, when I look over my shoulder, I sometimes see the staff in the beginning of their day. Some are so stressed, they can barely stand. Some of them, I feel, are living out some sort of "on the edge" life, day in and day out. This constant "edge" life is making many of them mentally ill and physically unwell. I think it's time to figure out what I'm going to do. I want to make sure that I can spend the next five, 10, maybe even 20 years here. I don't know how long my current employer is going to exist, and I don't want to invest all of my life in this place. One thought on "Five Reasons Your Job Is Killing You" Greetings Steff! I'm glad your body is acknowledging that you are suffering at work.. Do you need to make a change in your life to get out of work? You seem to have something going on. I wish you peace and clarity in the upcoming changes.
