The LCD display panel displays images by changing the orientation of an electric field, which is applied to each of liquid crystal molecules in a liquid crystal layer, to adjust the molecular arrangement of the liquid crystal layer. The liquid crystal display device includes a liquid crystal display panel having a pair of substrates and a liquid crystal layer interposed between the substrates. An electrode is formed on the inside surface of each substrate. In recent years, liquid crystal display devices, which include a light source such as a back light behind the liquid crystal display panel to display images on the liquid crystal display panel under light irradiation, have been developed. Specifically, the liquid crystal display device includes a light guiding plate between the liquid crystal display panel and the back light. The liquid crystal display device emits light from a light source in the back light and transmits this light through the light guiding plate. In this way, the liquid crystal display device displays images under light irradiation. The light guiding plate is formed in a frame-like shape having a predetermined width. The light guiding plate has an inner surface and the inner surface is formed into a surface in which, for example, parallel flat-plate-like light transmitting sections are aligned in a straight line in a direction in which light is emitted from the light source. The liquid crystal display device is provided with a reflector on the inner surface of the light guiding plate. The reflector is disposed immediately above the light transmitting sections so as to cover the light transmitting sections. On the inner surface of the light guiding plate, flat, planar portions, which are not formed into the light transmitting sections, are disposed in a gap between the light transmitting sections. The light guiding

A new judge will take charge of the notorious Santa Rita Jail in downtown San Antonio, the first newly-promoted judge in more than a decade in the wake of reform efforts and a downtown courtroom scandal. Texas 10th Court of Appeals Judge Maria T. Jackson was sworn in early this morning, according to the presiding judge, the Honorable John L. Davis. Jackson, a Democrat, was formerly a trial judge in Bell and Guadalupe counties. The reforms of a high-profile scandal at the downtown courthouse were spurred in part by Jackson's nomination to the bench in December. At that time, the Legislature confirmed that a bevy of court reforms were being studied, but none were enacted. One reform, created by the court, was the transfer of cases and judgeships away from downtown and into the judge's home district. The move did not come into effect, however, until after DA Manvel Rodriguez was confirmed for the position of Tarrant County district attorney. Jackson said that she was an "intense fan" of Rodriguez's appointment to that post. Her time on the bench, she said, will allow her to continue to advocate for reforms. "We know who doesn't care about reforming the county courts [in Tarrant County], but the new district attorney, for whatever reason, has sent a message with his appointment that he does," Jackson said. Jackson was nominated by Gov. Greg Abbott, who wanted a progressive judge at the court of appeals. The Texas Senate confirmed her nomination in March. "I guess it would be too late then," said Hector. "I just
