If you're looking for a place to talk about restaurants, bars, food trucks, recipes, snack and meal ideas, let's do this together. All recipes are made with whole, natural ingredients. I will give the low down on new products and restaurant news. I tend to have bad food days where I am not myself at all but this is a chance to talk about it all. Monday, August 26, 2010 No worries, no apologies. I ate the "free" food. I was full too. No whine. I mean, I love avocado. But I did wonder why I was told that because in my mind I had to eat it. I wouldn't be expected to eat so many chips, croutons, nuts and cheese if I was at home. But here it was freebie time, so after a bit of food all came down. I noticed the "free" spork but didn't even think about it, I just kept eating until I was full. At home, I go for as many treats as I want. There are no restrictions to my consumption of sweets. When in a restaurant or any place where people put limits on food, I am not coming across as a selfish jerk. Just someone who has been led by my body to have one too many treats at once. I didn't mean to be, but I did have a giant and a diet too. It just tends to happen. I'm glad I was able to pass a test I was given by the doctor at my first post surgery check-up. I was worried if I got that test wrong and had a repeat surgery I could be stuck with a permanent catheter. Glad to know that I passed. I am doing great, I think. I don't have the pain that I had the first time I had surgery. The pain I am experiencing is more from the shock of
