► APPLY YOUR OWN SPECIAL SKILLS ABOVE MOST CLASSES The user's skill tree is divided into seven categories: Acrobatics, Athletics, Speechcraft, Vitality, Magic, Deepness, and Movement. Whatever abilities you choose, you can level them up and strengthen them by using various item effects. ► BLOOD-CALM DEFENDER Enemies attack quickly. You need to pay close attention to your surroundings. You can immediately dodge or block any attacks, regardless of your class, even without the use of a weapon. ► PROTECTIVE DASHES Opponents usually rush you from behind, and you do not notice them. Your own health disappears and you instantly fall, but your dash protects you. ► DOUBLE DASH You can dash to the front and rear at the same time to deal a powerful attack. As you dash, you receive a certain amount of extra health, which will be used during the next attack. ► HARSH BLOW You cannot dodge your opponent's attacks, but you have a few seconds of reprieve before you are struck again. ► POWERS EQUIPPED You can use several abilities that are not included in your class in addition to your class skills. What's new in Elden Ring:

We forgot some console message on why we decide to do archlinux on the Emulator. For the xbox port, the game is in late alpha stage (mastering is finished and tweaking is in process), and it's release isn't far. I don't know if it will be released on that console, but it seems it's a good idea to have an archlinux on the emulator to easily check with it. We can't ask on the official website but we did ask for the alpha configuration, and they gave a few answers related to their github/filepager but we didn't try that. Quote: In, to aid in testing, we will be moving forward on the Emulator to support an xbox console, a target distribution of Arch Linux, and the ability for keyboard and mouse to remain fully functional. We will be developing the necessary support framework for keyboard and mouse input, as well as aim for complete support for controllers by the time of the final release. xbox controller support will be done with the WineX (formerly included in Wine) xbox driver, with additional tweaking if required. Emulation Hardware: We are currently in the process of gathering information regarding Xbox Emulation specific hardware requirements. Quote: Distribution: The currently supported arch distribution will be Arch Linux, and we will be, at a later date, considering supporting distributions in other architectures. (FWIW, it is our plan to include support for the Raspberry Pi and Cuckoo Editions on the alpha currently available at github, but this is outside the scope of our current project.) If you have a distro that you feel might be of interest, we will be watching the arch-ent forums and social media for future options. We thank you for your support, and look forward to seeing your feedback! As you can see, we tried to keep a free spirit and not try to accomplish too much. :-) We're currently in the alpha, having everything we need, but we still have to consider the required keyboard/mouse support, as this is a constraint. For now, we use the Fira Sans font, I'll try to get more involved in this matter to evaluate some new ones compatible with UWP games. It'd be amazing to make this font using although the archlinux Xfce team already did it, so why try again? Maybe I'm wrong, but if you put this.
