Can be enhanced in eight stages by leveling upQ: Searching for a number in three separate files I have a list of files (CSV) with at least three columns: Column1 Column2 Column3 23 4 3 27 1 4 5 9 9 I'm able to find a specific row in a file, using awk $ awk '/C1/ {print $2}' FILE 4 1 9 But I'd like to find a specific row, knowing that it may be in any of the files. I know I can use cat to print the output of awk to a file, but I don't want to do that, because I'm going to print different outputs to different files. What I'd like to be able to do is to use awk to find the row that matches my criteria, and then print it from any of the three files. I haven't been able to figure out how to do this, either by piping awk to cat, or otherwise. A: I think you're looking for grep: $ grep -Fwf file1 file2 file3

Create Your Story with the New Fantasy Action RPG!

Certainly an interesting game! I think that for me, and my character's plans, there's no way he can get the money he needs and I'll just be disappointed with the game. That, or I'll find a way to kill him without him noticing me. Indeed, at first, I was convinced that I'll have my characters get in touch with some sort of accessible trackable item/currency that we could trade the horse to pay the money we need, but then I realized that that was a pretty out-of-the-box thinking that I hadn't considered because I am usually critical towards games that I can't "die" in due to mechanics (as per the game's design). Now we'll see, I guess. But I was still surprised to see the numerical counts of the titles! I know many are part of a way bigger franchise, but I didn't expect so many gaming western japanese games! I'll have to go through every single one to see what kind of products they are. This is my 100th post. Wow! It's a bit of a milestone. I hope there are many people reading these posts and commenting!
