FIFA Moves to Real-Life Motion Capture Data Collects motion capture data from real-life NFL players to power gameplay. New camera technology Use the new camera and player tracking technology to provide highly realistic player and ball movement, physics and animations. Ball Physics Player and ball physics are driven from the real-world physics data provided by the NFL motion capture suits. Kick-off From Kick-Off Change a kickoff into a cross with the right stick and kick into the back of the net. Then, adjust your direction to lead the defender into an aerially challenging cross, or use it as an on-ball throw to your team-mate for a chance at goal. Or even drop the ball down to a team-mate with a drop-kick. FIFA Skills Small, swift dribbling and feinting moves are vital in controlling the ball. With this in mind, FIFA Skills introduces the new Control Point (CP) system. As players are in possession of the ball they can perform different actions to achieve a CP, making it more challenging and exciting to play. Player Impact When players receive a long pass from a team-mate, the ball can be controlled with a flick of the foot. In the dribbling moves, players can perform a short move, a slide-tackle and a feint to create opportunities for their team-mates. All these actions are weighted to be efficient for the control of the ball. New Attacking System With the new pitch-awareness system and the new forward pass, new attacking options become available in open play. Forward Pass The pass is now possible while under pressure, and new receiving options exist when the opponent is away from goal. Improved Physics Ball physics are driven from the real-world physics data provided by the NFL motion capture suits. The new REACT engine makes the ball react like the real deal – from a simple shot to a cross, from a free kick to a corner – enabling players to create goal-scoring opportunities. Team-mates Watch as the ball moves in a natural way around your team-mates, reacting to the players' sudden movements. Defending Systems Pressure the defence down and force the opposition to make a decision. Play out of the back and target their goal-box, or
