Under which conditions will a CDI injection work on a Stateful Session Bean I am trying to do a CDI injection in a Stateful Session Bean. I have been able to inject beans successfully using this pattern. But I am not able to inject objects (thread-local injection). I have found an answer to this ( but it is for JSF bean. I am using CDI and Glassfish. So my question is: Under which conditions will a CDI injection work on a Stateful Session Bean? And how do we make thread-local injection with a stateful session bean? A: In general CDI is pretty liberal. E.g. a Stateful Session Bean would not be considered a subject for injection by @Inject, even though it is a consumable resource. So you will need to make sure the injection is in the same scope of the session bean. Thus @Named("mySessionBean") public class MySessionBean implements Serializable { ... @PostConstruct public void init() { ... } } will work, e.g. when called from a @ManagedBean. So it should be fine. The only problem is that if you are in a @RequestScoped bean you do not have the other data in scope.
@Named("myRequestScopedBean") @RequestScoped public class MyRequestScopedBean { ... @Inject private MySessionBean mySessionBean; ... } will not work in a @RequestSc
