Where to Start If you're interested in learning how to edit an image in Photoshop, here are a few tips to get you started. Enable Layer Styles and Adjustment Layers When you open a file in Photoshop, you'll see that it's laid out in layers. The layers include a flattened background layer, masks, flattened layers, and layers that contain the actual image. All layers have a style, meaning they can have things like fills, borders, and gradients applied to them. Layers that are applied to the background have the ability to change the background color. When you open up the layers, you can apply different styles to each layer to make it easier to change your looks. Click Layers in the dialog box to open up the Layers panel. This panel is divided into two sections: Layers and Transparency. Layer styles are applied to the layers directly, but adjusting layer styles applies a change to the underlying layer. To open up the Layers panel in the Photoshop interface, click the Layers button in the interface bar to open the panel or click the Layers button at the top of the Photoshop main window. The Layers panel is located on the right side of the interface bar when it's open. Basic Edit Mode After you get the hang of the basics of working with layers, it's time to start doing some editing. In Photoshop, each new layer is put on top of what was already on top of it, and you can make that change on any of the layers with it. The background layer is the layer that is on top, and therefore is the final layer. To edit an image, press the Del key on your keyboard to cut the image off of that layer. In the editing tools bar above, you'll find a few basic editing tools. The Rectangular Selection tool allows you to select a rectangle of any size. The Lasso tool is basically a grabber that allows you to select an area of an image. The Magic Wand tool is what you'd use to select an area in an image that doesn't look right. Once you select the area with the Magic Wand, you'll have to click where you want to get that area. The Selection Brush allows you to paint a selection on any layer in Photoshop, including the background layer. The Pencil tool is pretty much what it

(CNN) Red hot: DeLeon Jaramillo's bloodied head was lacerated by flying glass as he was shot during a Halloween night brawl inside a Houston house, and he was lucky he survived. He fled the scene of the fight after being shot, but a trail of blood behind him told the stories of others in the fight, including his neighbor, who managed to flee unharmed. Police have charged six people with misdemeanors in connection with the incident that involved more than 20 people. The fight began after some of the suspects' nephews threw bottles at the house where the party was held and then burned the fence that separated their property from the house, according to the Houston Police Department. Police are investigating whether the fight was a result of a long-standing feud between the nephews and their uncle, identified by police as 30-year-old Deleon Jaramillo. The uncle told police he lived there and rented out the house to his nephews in the weeks leading up to the party, said the Houston Police Department. Police arrived on the scene after a neighbor called 911 at about 1:15 a.m. on October 31 to complain about more than a dozen teenagers running from the street to the home and then leaving the house, police said. Police then went inside the house and found people running around through the house, which was in disarray. Other people had been injured, some of them seriously. Police saw blood and footprints inside. Police then learned that one of the suspects had been shot. Jaramillo was found at the scene with a head wound. He told police he had been hit by broken glass from a bottle that was thrown at the house and was running away when he was shot.
