Most of the so-called "protestors" that Trump derided, some of whom were not even permitted to enter the arena, appeared to be mostly polite—though a few were not very polite. But the city of Cleveland could not be more different on the left. Protesters of all types and sizes made their voices heard, by and large along Martin Luther King Drive. The pop-up democracy called The People's Republic of Cleveland is going strong, having installed a temporary electoral commission atop the Cleveland Art Museum. "We recognize the need for immediate reform, and this commission is a major step toward that reform," People's Republic coordinator Joshua Gimmel told NextShark. "But this is only a beginning." At a press conference just before 4:30 p.m., when the throngs had thinned to just a few dozen protestors, Gimmel explained their mission. "It's the most defining moment of the election that we have to use our voice," he said. "It's not enough for us to say we support Hillary Clinton." The People's Republic were there to make sure that the people of Cleveland who support Clinton were counted. They had been holding at least two simultaneous rallies at the art museum in Lake View for hours on Monday. They brought the spirit of Occupy to Cleveland, Gimmel told NextShark, and the entire time they've been trying to publicize the organization. "I think a lot of people don't understand that you can be in favor of Clinton and not agree with the TPP," Gimmel

This era is remembered in our memory as the era of mass strikes and hard working of the masses for the defense of the socialist society... The atmosphere of life at the end of the 1930s was different from a more placid period of the 1920s. Then people were surprised and astonished by the appearance of the locomotive in the railway stations, which were plastered with exhortations to the workers: "Attention — there will be a strike!"... More than that, these warnings were sometimes followed by actual strikes and conductors refused to work and the trains did not run! Over the last few days, this has become an ordinary, routine thing. While a few months ago people did not use trains much, at least they do not look like this. There are thousands of trains and locomotives that run on the rails today, while just a few months ago there were only hundreds. And now it is just a matter of time when we will be left with only two or three dozen locomotives... The locomotive shall return all capital to its carriers and provide a large proportion of the transport of coal, iron ore, and other raw materials. The locomotive has a good reputation, can transport a good load and a lot of passengers. The simulator experience of people is very important. You need a soft pad, because it is not easy to control a fast locomotive. Also, to be able to concentrate on a driving task, the track should be level. The author claims that the quality of the graphics is very high. NOTE: The freight locomotive SO17 is not included in Trainz World. Video game modes: - Single player - He can participate in a quiz at the end of the game and receive bonus points - Multiplayer - Use the TzTrain.com service Storyline of the game: The end of the 1930s — the time of great and small events. Life has no rules at all, and the future of every person is unpredictable. The main character of the story became a railway policeman. He was thrown into turmoil by all the tasks that the locomotive has performed during the last few months. And now the greatest locomotive must return all the wealth that they have earned through their work. It is a railway police officer who in December 1930 must go to the coal trains, find the culprit and stop him for the theft of many tons of coal and to present it back to the coal company. The role of central neurones as the target structures of hallucinogens. All hallucinogens have a common action on limbic structures that modulate behaviour. However, the effect they have on various subregions within the limbic system has been difficult to gauge unless specific methods have been used for comparative purposes. This problem has been studied using microscopic techniques to examine the internal structures of limbic areas of the developing tree shrew (Tupaia glis). The nucleus caudatus, the nucleus of the diagonal band, the medial nucleus of the amygdala, the medial preoptic nucleus and the central nucleus of the amygdala all contain a small number of large neurones with relatively dense staining for gamma-aminobutyric acid (GABA) but slightly less for acetylcholine (ACh) and phenylethanolamine-N-methyl transferase (PNMT). All of these limbic structures were grossly identified using a neurotoxin impregnated in gelatin capsules. Intraperitoneal injection of the cholinergic neurotoxin, NMS, reduced, but did not abolish staining for GABA in CA1, CA2, dentate gyrus and the dorsal part of nucleus of the lateral olfactory tract. Most of these areas include either the densely innervated glomerulus of the central nucleus of the amygdala or the neurop
