Before you start playing, check all the rules that apply to Crossroads and Dead End cards. Like in the base game, the draw/discard phase should go as follows: – Phase 1: You draw 5 cards. Each of your players gets their own hand. – Phase 2: You discard your hand, and draw 4 new cards. – Phase 3: You discard 2 cards (1 for each of your players), and draw 2 new cards. – Phase 4: You discard 1 card for each of your players, and you draw 2 new cards. -If there are 2 crossroad cards of the same color, they should be played as one unique whole (example: a Crossroad colored 1 red, 2 red). So, if you have two Crossroad cards of red color, you can only play one of them, and put the other in your discard pile. – If a card on the discard pile (NOT from the Nightmare pile) is a Crossroad card, you can discard it (example: discard a Crossroad card, then you draw a Nightmare card) – If a Crossroad is on top of a Nightmares pile, you can play it, but it is replaced by the topmost Crossroad card on the Nightmares pile, and both Crossroads are put into your discard pile. – Once in the game, if you manage to play a Crossroad on top of your Nightmares pile without using the Escape option (see later), you can discard it. The other cards that have to be set aside are the ones on the Nightmare pile, and the Escape cards (discarded by your escape). Game Rule 2: “The Escape”, or “Spreading the Fear” In this game, you will find not one or two, but a total of three Escapes (see the card). - An Escape is used to remove all 3 nightmares from the table. - An Escape is used when a player has two Nightmares on the table. - An Escape is used when a player has only 1 Nightmare on the table. The escape in effect disappears from the player’s table, until the Nightmare is resolved, or the Escape triggered. The Escape may be played by the owner of the Nightmare card, or by another player. As in the basic game, each nightmare has a weight of 10 in phase 1. Each time a Nightmare card is resolved during phase 1, the cost is either increased by 10 points, or
