

Rovi (MainConcept) TotalCode 6.0.3 (x64) NEW!

The edit menu is based on a menu bar solution of the MainConcept plug-in. It contains both the functions of the MainConcept menu bar as well as a selection of additional menu items and a number of less important operations. The menu bar is resizable, as are the options of the color panel, the titler, titler mode, the names and dates, and the preview (see Figure 2.19).  Figure 2.19  The Rovi TotalCode 6.0.3 (64 Bit) menu bar, which will be integrated in Premiere Pro CS5.5 when the series of Premiere Pro updates of May 2012 will be released. The Rovi TotalCode 6.0.3 (64 Bit) menu bar is integrated in the menu bar now. The menu bar is resizable and is distinguished by the advantages of the Rovi TotalCode (MainConcept) menu bar. The Rovi TotalCode plug-in (MainConcept) is a continuation of the famous plugin MainConcept. For example: The name of the MainConcept plug-in, the MainConcept Codec Suite 5.1x and MainConcept ProHD Codec Suite 6.1x with all additional plug-ins and codecs of MainConcept. For more information about the features of Rovi TotalCode (MainConcept) open the main menu and press the settings item (see Figure 2.20). We have included the MainConcept Plugin Suite 6.1x with the MainConcept logo.  Figure 2.20  Note  In the menu bar, there are a few additional functions, such as the access to sequence settings or the "After Editor" pop-up menu. In Premiere Pro CS5.5, the Rovi TotalCode 6.0.3 (64 Bit) menu bar is integrated in the menu bar.  Figure 2.21   Figure 2.22   Figure 2.23  The Rovi TotalCode (MainConcept) in the menu bar is highlighted in blue, which indicates that a Rovi TotalCode (MainConcept) update is available. The Rovi TotalCode for Adobe Premiere Pro - Version 6.0.3 update is used very rarely.  Note  The MainConcept Plugin

Rotating selector tables (or wagons), in which the selector wheels are mounted on the same shaft and are turned synchronously therewith, have been widely used in the past to provide for the dispensing of products from cans and other containers in which the products are arranged to be dispensed in successive groups. Such selector tables are typically employed in situations where the groups of products to be dispensed to the user are arranged or positioned in different locations relative to the selector tables and/or are arranged to be dispensed in different sizes or groups. Rotating selector tables have been designed which have selectively positionable selector wheels and selectively controllable dispensing mechanisms. In addition to the multiple selector wheels, the rotating selector table is typically designed to accommodate other associated mechanisms to affect the products being dispensed. Such mechanisms may include product separating mechanisms (e.g., cutting blades, brush assemblies, etc.) and/or presentation mechanisms (e.g., pushers, springs, rollers, etc.). Generally, the primary disadvantage of rotating selector tables is that each selector wheel is positioned in the same location relative to the table's stationary structure for dispensing of each of the product groups. For example, such rotating tables have been utilized to dispense items having different heights or sizes where the items are arranged to be dispensed in single rows and/or different heights or sizes of columns or rows.
