employee at a New Hampshire mall, cashier Patrick Purdy dropped his cellphone in a trash can and decided it was time for a healthier slice of life, The Huffington Post reported Wednesday. Purdy, who works the overnight shift at Mac's Deli, told The Huffington Post he had been receiving a lot of pressure to start working out. So, one night, he decided to make a change by going to the mall for a midnight walk. "I left after one and a half hours," Purdy told the site. "But I didn't have a single craving. My blood sugar was perfect and I felt better than when I got up in the morning. I did all this alone and was not really trying to meet anyone." With the help of a former coworker, Purdy started a blog to track his transformations, including some everyday life tips. A former weight-loss center owner, he has lost 30 pounds and is now at his ideal weight and size. "A pound a day can add up," he told The Huffington Post. "I'm no longer the big guy, and I don't have to worry about carrying around extra weight. I feel better than when I was 30 pounds heavier." He said it took him six years to get his body right. And he doesn't expect to lose all that weight overnight, though he hopes to look better and feel better as time goes by. "If I had a tattoo, I would put it on my butt saying, 'I've lost 30 pounds,'" Purdy told the site. "It's not something I was trying to do. But if you can make a change in one's life, you should have a little pride in that."
