An anti-tank version equipped with four HOT 3 missiles Fully modeled weapon system including missiles, sight and gun AFM (Advanced Flight Model) that simulates all flight phases and characteristics of the Gazelle Mouse interactive cockpit Includes all essential features of the Gazelle Exclusive tutorial Interactive campaign Included flight manual Gazelle skins covering many countries This is the Game - Operation Thunder Game Modes: Deathmatch Team Deathmatch Solo Harvester ABOUT THE GAME The U.S. Army is given the mission to capture an enemy that has a vast supply of anti-tank weaponry that is causing the destruction of several of its outposts. Starting near the border of Iraq, the mission will take the players to many different locations and environments in the Middle East, using stealth tactics to bring them closer to their objective. During the entire campaign, the players will have to use the full array of weapons that are available to them on the battlefield. Teamwork is an important component of combat, which is why the ARES and Close Combat Squadrons are fully supported by the American tech tree. The ships may be small on the outside, but the amount of firepower they can unleash is absolutely devastating. * Commander is the combination of ADS, Homing Missile and TOS in one. Recommended only for experienced pilots. * Gazelle is the anti-tank vehicle featuring a compact area defense system and a powerful machinegun mounted under the nose. The American Technology tree is the basis for the weapons and technology of the game - expect to see the most common U.S. weapons systems and airframes in action. * All American airframes can be used as player aircraft, as U.S. and Iraqi forces have different airframes available. * The Navy and Marine Corps can also be used in the game in its own right, but some of the aircraft and ground vehicles may take slightly different roles. The following is a list of some of the weapons available to U.S. and Iraqi forces: * LMG - M249 SAW - The best weapon in the world, and the platform and purpose of which is to enable the infantry to fire and move. * R5B - 8-Ft. TEL - In short, a basic rifle with no sights and only one shot per clip. * MGL - M163 -

INTRODUCTION TO GEE — Uf-18, Dutch Police Gunship GEE - A series of fly-by-wire helicopters, developed by both Westland and Aérospatiale for a multitude of uses, all based on the license-produced Eurocopter AS350. The first of these was the Tiger attack helicopter, which has now become the Tiger II. Some other helicopters are the Ecureuil, Grafarar, H160 Inspire, or Heron - all three-engined helicopters, designed to be transported by C-130 aircraft. Today, the company's product line is based on the NH-90 - the multi-purpose NH-90A and the armed NH-90B. The first civilian use was in 1997 and, in October 2004, the first military order went in for the NH-90. The UH-1 is the armed NH-90A model, named after the UH-1 Iroquois, and the NH-90B is the armed variant of the NH-90, which is also the first battlefield helicopter to be built. The company has a close relationship with the École Nationale d'Art et de Technique de l'Espace (National Engineering School for Spacecraft and Rockets, ENATE). This relationship is the basis for the GEE - designed helicopters that are mainly used for the command and reconnaissance roles. The two main versions are the UAV version with an onboard engine and the armed version with an integrated powerplant in the main fuselage. For recreational use, GEE helicopters are commonly used for airshows or for private customers. Examples of these GEE helicopter models are the EC-130E, EC-130E3, EH-101, and EC-20B. However, the armed NH-90B or UH-1 is more common in this role. GEE-related products have been designed and built by the French company, Dassault Aviation, who produced the original EH-101, and by the Japanese-based manufacturer, Skyworth. Skyworth Gee helicopters are also manufactured in India, Vietnam and, more recently, the Ukraine. GEE-developed helicopters have been used by the French military, and a limited number have been sold to the Belgian Air Force, the Indian Air Force, and the Russian military. Other operators are the Army of the Netherlands, the German Army,
