This object should serialize a collection of classes which are marked as [Serializable]. In a certain situation there is only one such child class, but in other cases there can be more, so it should be possible to serialize the object. This works as long as every child class implements Serializable, but what if one child class does not? Is there a way to serialize the object in a generic way, as long as one of the classes to be serialized implements Serializable? Note that other information should stay as it is, i.e. only the objects in the collection to be serialized should be serialized. A: Serialize to XML public static String ConvertToXml(T Obj) { StringBuilder sb = new StringBuilder(); sb.Append(DataContractSerializer.WriteObject(Obj, new XmlWriterSettings { WriteIndent = true, Indent = true, NewLineChars = Environment.NewLine, Encoding = Encoding.UTF8 })); return sb.ToString(); } XmlSerializer public

The marked self-identity of their creators is linked to a certain degree of stability and continuity, to which the narrative is meant to contribute in its own way. Metatypes are commonly used in newspaper stories and in television and cinema films. This paper tries to explain how metatypes integrate into a generic reader/viewer identification process which ultimately contributes to constituting identity. The paper also tries to make a case for metatypes as a key strategy for strengthening readership and viewership.For our big announcement video, consider 'Wolves: The 2018 Album'. A: Thank you for the gratitude, I am happy i can help, I am able to help you now, but please ensure you do have s7-200 and s7-300 and change plc to 300, its any other plc for simatic plc and any other software is you have. Here is a link to a hardware testers site for you, this is a off load link, but you can click it and bring it to front. As its not really specific for simatic plc and s7-200 you can find more info here. These will help you get the right hardware to test on. Thanks again, don't forget to mark it as answer if you have any questions. A peptide inhibitor of splicing of the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) genome. HIV-1 reverse transcriptase has two ribonuclease H (RNase H) domains: N-terminal domain (NTD) with a separate RNA 3'-substrate binding site and C-terminal domain (CTD) with a single RNase H site. Peptides corresponding to amino acid 1 to 41 of the NTD inhibit HIV-1 reverse transcriptase by reducing the affinity of the enzyme for the viral genomic RNA. The ribonuclease H inhibitor (RHI) was generated by deleting six amino acids from the N-terminus of the peptide. The peptide is able to inhibit the binding of the enzyme to the viral RNA, indicating that the peptide N-terminus is exposed and interacts directly with the enzyme active site during the completion of reverse transcription. This peptide can be used as a lead molecule in the design of potent inhibitors that act by blocking the binding of the enzyme to the viral RNA.The invention concerns a stable, non-pyrogenic, dry, sterile solid nasal preparation which contains peptide transfer factor from inflamed epithelia and a carrier material such as microcrystalline cellulose. The therapy of upper respiratory tract infections with peptide transfer factor (PTF) induces a significant improvement of the course of
