I am writing a paper using latex+book class. In my paper, I have a figure that is meant to be part of a later publication. When I am writing my in-text citation, I am using the \includegraphics command. While writing the paper, I am pasting the image in manually, so that I can edit it. I understand that I can paste in this figure using \includegraphics, but I am using that in conjunction with a multicols environment in an effort to ensure that, when pasted, the figure spreads across the page. Unfortunately, the multicols environment causes an error when I try to paste the figure. My question: how do I paste an image into a pdf that has a multicols environment on a page? A: This is fairly easily done using the \clipbox command. The typical usage is \begin{figure} \centering \includegraphics{blah/blahblah} \caption{My caption} \clipbox{.75 bc9d6d6daa
