Q: How to load different plots with different functionality at a time on the axis with Shiny I've got a shiny app that is essentially a funnel in which the user can choose a dataset from a dropdown and the funnel proceeds by plotting "trajectories". The user can choose either the "AllTrajectories" option to be plotted on the x- axis, or the individual "Trajectories" each plotted on a line with a 2D line plot. What's happening is the data is plotting, but it's all happening at the same time, but if the user chooses the AllTrajectories option, it's doing it all at once with no lines. I understand that I need to use plotly or some similar API, but I'm not sure how to incorporate these into the shiny app. Here's a simplified version of my app that should be reproducible:

library(shiny) source("./Code_Files/R_Code.R") runApp(list(ui = pageWithSidebar( headerPanel("Data Visualization"), sidebarPanel( sliderInput("data", "Choose the dataset:", min = 0, max = 9, value = 0), sliderInput("plotOption", "Choose the Plot Option", min = "all", max = "all", value = "all"), actionButton("upload", "Upload") ), mainPanel( plotOutput("plot") ) )) And here's the server: library(shiny) library(tidyverse) server
