I want to ask if there's a way to do this with a List or similar but where the lists are stored together instead of as separate lists. That is, is there any way to do this in C# or was the best way to group them manually like this?: This is the list: John Mike Mike John And it should look like this: John Mike Mike John Mike Mike A: Use Linq to group by name. var list = new List() { new YourEntity() {Name = "john", Surname = "test"}, new YourEntity() {Name = "mike", Surname = "test2"}, new YourEntity() {Name = "john", Surname = "test3"}, new YourEntity() {Name = "mike", Surname = "test2"}, new YourEntity() {Name = "john", Surname = "test4"}, }; var groupedList = list .GroupBy(el => el.Name) .Select(grp => grp.OrderBy(el => el.Surname).First()); //Insert into a list or whatever...
