so, i tried norton 360 and it may not be very good. i have it set up to let me use the trial. i tried using the config.xml file to change my norton 360 password. but, when i go to sign into norton 360, it tells me that i have an account and it ask me to create a user id and password. my password is incorrect. there is another answer that says that i need to do a factory restore. i am not sure if that is what i should do. i have a hp omen 17 laptop with windows 10. i did a factory reset for the omen 17 laptop and i get a error message that says error! the operating system is not available. user interface cannot be displayed. we are sorry for the inconvenience. the user interface will now close. there are two great things about norton 360. first, it does an excellent job of identifying the keyloggers, adware, and spyware that have been installed on my system. i can also easily remove them and then let norton 360 alert me when the threat is detected again. it seems that norton 360 is constantly detecting threats, and removing them at a high rate. the second great thing is that norton 360 seems to update the "kill counter" so that i know how many trojans i have removed. this is really nice because it lets me know exactly what i need to look for on my next download. norton 360 is a relatively comprehensive security suite. its not perfect, but its ok. it does a decent job of identifying threats, and i have to give norton kudos for taking a proactive approach with threats. you can also use it as a keyword replacement service. it just doesn't have the general user interfaces that some other security suites have. that being said, its got good reviews, i have used it myself, and its a great addition to any computer.
