From the section Rugby Union Ben Youngs has been with Northampton since signing for them from Leicester in 2010. Ben Youngs has been forced to pull out of England's Six Nations game against Italy due to injury. Youngs, the centre, was taken to hospital on Friday after hurting his back in a training exercise. The 28-year-old has been replaced by Saints team-mate Henry Slade. England's squad will take on Italy at Twickenham on Sunday (14:45 GMT). It is a straight swap from the England team that faced Wales last weekend as Youngs pulled out at the last minute.

Saracens' Youngs was England's starting centre in the opening international of the 2014-15 season against New Zealand, and began the 2015 Six Nations with two penalties against Australia. He missed two games last term through injury, before recovering in time to play in England's final game of last year's championship, which they lost 14-9 to Ireland. Youngs was also part of the team that beat France in Paris in November last year.

11 Apr What is the Six Nations Championship? The Six Nations Championship is the annual showcase of elite club rugby union - England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales and Italy. It is contested between these countries. Teams are matched in a tournament that runs from February to early March. The 2014-15 tournament is scheduled to start on 3 February and will be run over eight weekends. What are these extra fixtures? The Six Nations Championship includes a series of extra matches: Scotland v Ireland at Murrayfield, Wales v England at Twickenham, and Italy v France at Murrayfield. In addition, the Six Nations Championship includes a fixture called the Triple Crown which is held every four years. The last Triple Crown competition was staged in 2011. Italy and France originally reached the final of the 2011 championship and won it, but England beat Wales.
