bittorrent is a peer-to-peer file-sharing protocol for distribution of files, usually in the form of torrents. the protocol was developed by bram cohen and is the successor to the bittorrent protocol. bittorrent clients such as bittorrent and utorrent use the bittorrent protocol for p2p file-sharing, and peers help with the distribution of large files, by splitting them into small pieces that are downloaded by many people all at once. a peer is any bittorrent client, either the bittorrent client itself or another computer running a bittorrent client. a tracker is a bittorrent node which keeps track of available peers and the current working shared files. bittorrent uses the p2p protocol with a tracking system known as p-seeding. p-seeding is a peer-based system that establishes a shared list of torrent files known as the swarm and lets the clients in the swarm choose which files to download in order to earn bandwidth and increase the file's popularity. the first client to connect to the tracker announces its presence as a seeder and earns an initial download speed of zero bits per second (or bps). 4shared is a large private bittorrent tracker based in russia that focuses on quality content and is an exclusive distribution partner of many popular private trackers. with more than 550,000 registered users, the file sizes of the torrents it makes available are very large. its catalogs include large media files, such as high-definition movies, three-dimensional graphics and other video content. mininova is a hosting service for torrents. mininova offers free, public torrents as well as a premium service which is a little expensive but offers much more. it's not a typical content-delivery network since it is not in charge of torrent uploads and downloads. mininova is famous for its databases of torrents and uses the magnet links format. torrents are traditionally delivered using streaming downloaders like utorrent, or via http-streaming downloaders like azureus or vuze.

plenty of torrent sites exist, but few are as popular as the pirate bay. the site is mostly known for hosting pirated versions of movies, music, and games. in more recent times, the site has become infamous for hosting pirated content, including child pornography. for desktop users, it's a great way to download torrents, but for those who prefer to stay away from ads and malware, piratebrowser can be used. you can also use a number of private torrent trackers, which offer content not found on the major tracker sites.

however, this comes at the cost of a smaller user base and lack of statistics. torrent sites are a good alternative for downloading media that you cant buy. for instance if you cant buy or legally download a movie, you can look up if it is available on a torrent site and download it there. this can be very dangerous however, as most torrent sites host and distribute malware. also to some extent, torrents are a slow method of downloading video and media files. it can take a long time to download and upload a movie or tv show.

torrent sites are evil. i mean, they host torrents of illegal stuff. their actual good side is that you can find specific series to download at a very low cost (compared to the typical cable and satellite packages) and that the quality is high. if you're looking for illegal stuff, make sure you seek out a torrent site. they're a bit like a torrent site with a more restricted search because they focus more on videos, movies and music in the genres you're looking for. however, there are some caveats. first of all, torrents are large files (because of all the extra files) and that means it's going to take a long time to download. it's not uncommon to take about 10-20 minutes to download a torrent. 5ec8ef588b
