All but the most tech-savvy Mac users will find themselves in that situation at some point, especially if they use many online services. MacID is a free utility from Softonic that automates the whole process of resetting and resetting your password, eliminating the headache. There are many situations when you might need to reset your Mac. For example, if you have forgotten a password or it has been stolen, if you lose the recovery key that came with your computer, or if you need to change your Mac's password. 1. Start up the MacID application. Click on the application icon in the Applications folder. A window will open with the MacID icon in it. On the MacID homepage, click on the "Login" button at the top of the screen. MacID will then open the Reset Mac screen, on which you will need to enter your email address. In order to reset your Mac, you need to enter the email address associated with the Apple ID that you are using. Click on "Next" when you're done entering your email address. The reset password screen will appear, which will allow you to reset the password for your administrator account. At this point, you will be prompted to choose a password for the administrator account, which will be reset. You can add a hint if you like, and then click on " 2edc1e01e8
