Transepithelial transport of vitamin C: studies of the isolated perfused rabbit kidney. The transepithelial transport of vitamin C (ascorbic acid) was studied in the isolated perfused rabbit kidney. Na-ascorbate was significantly more secreted than K-ascorbate. Vitamin C transport was inhibited by probenecid and acetazolamide, which are substrates of the p-glycoprotein pathway of active transport, and was stimulated by ethacrynic acid, a substrate of the organic ion pathway of active transport. We concluded that the transepithelial transport of vitamin C in the isolated perfused rabbit kidney is mediated by a combination of the p-glycoprotein and organic ion pathway of active transport.

George Strachan (Argyll MP) Sir George Strachan, 1st Baronet, FRSE, MP, DL (1775 - 18 June 1840), known as Sir George Strachan, 8th Baronet, of Stobcross, was a Scottish politician and lawyer. Family He was born George Strachan, of Stobcross House near Stonehaven in Aberdeenshire, the son of James Strachan (d. 1789) of Stobcross and his wife, Lady Harriet Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Andrew Stuart, 9th Earl of Moray. He married twice: first, on 16 January 1800, to Juliana Maria Malcolm, the daughter of Andrew Malcolm, MP, by his wife, Lady Margaret Chalmers, widow of the 5th Earl of Dysart and daughter of the Marquess of Dalhousie, who survived him, without issue; and secondly, in July 1815, to Lady Jane Dundas, eldest daughter of John Dundas, 2nd Earl of Zetland. Political career He was a member of the Scottish Parliament (MSP) for the burgh of Aberdeen from 1793 to 1796 and was Member of Parliament (MP) for Aberdeenshire from 1807 to 1822. In 1818 he was created Baronet, of

Inaugural Block Party celebration at the British Film Institute Over the course of a jam-packed week at the British Film Institute (BFI) cinema in London, we have hosted a series of events from its director, Amanda Nevill, to celebrate the Institute's 25th birthday. Our Facebook page also recorded some great memories in video form. So, check out and watch some of the best moments from the week. Here's to 25 years of film. A ground-breaking exhibition Celebrating the magazine's illustrious history, we have been delighted to host a limited edition, one-off exhibition marking the 25th anniversary of The Film magazine. Entitled 'The Film Magazine: Wild Strangers', the exhibition runs until 29th October and will feature the personal possessions of this "Filmag" icon, including a priceless vintage typewriter. On show will be some of the film industry's most famous posters, BFI screens, original scripts and production notes, alongside personal artifacts such as the typewriter mentioned earlier. If you can't make it to London over the next few days, you can still attend The Film magazine's 25th anniversary event in Hertfordshire. Entitled 'Wild Strangers', it will be hosted by BFI deputy director Marc Munden and The Film magazine editor, Ian Christie, at Gedding Manor Country House Hotel in Hert f988f36e3a
