The other content-aware fill tool that you might need is the mask. A mask is needed when the photo may contain additional elements such as text or semi-transparent objects that we don't want to fill up, such as a logo or text. It is the most preferable tool for the photo editing technology as we can keep the logo or typography with transparency intact. If we use the content-aware fill tool and accidentally fill up the logo, then we can use the mask to get rid of it. Photoshop has some amazing tools for the digital photo editing technology such as the healing brush, burn, dodge, and cement. The Heal tool is useful in removing the harsh features from a photo and making it look better, while the Burn tool is effective in giving a photo a dramatic impact. Dodge and cement work on the different colors as well as light and shadow creating a very sharp image. To make a photo sharp, we first need to use the Sharp tool and delete the noise in the photo. Next, we use the Curves tools to adjust the lighting. Finally, we combine dodge and burn on the different parts of the photo to create the photo sharpness. For a fast photo editing experience we can use the Smart Sharpen tool, which applies sophisticated local contrast edge detection techniques to sharpening. If the photo is a little blurred, we can use the blur tool to soften the edges. The Photoshop has also introduced the Content-Aware-Fill tool. The Content-Aware-Fill tool is also a feature a user is using commonly among some of the peoples as the people use to make a large photo into small or medium size. The Content-Aware-Fill tool is designed to work on the Inverse Operating System to fill up the blanks of the photo. When you launch the tool, it first searches the blanks in the photo by comparing the content of that blank with other nearby content. It then applies the best results to the selected area in the photo. If the search fail to find any good match for the area, then it will make the area solid
