I'm just using the auth code from standard laravel: public function login(Request $request) { $this->validate($request, [ 'email' =>'required|email', 'password' =>'required|min:6' ]); $credentials = $request->only('email', 'password'); // Attempt to login the user if (Auth::attempt($credentials)) { return redirect('dashboard'); } else { //Login error messages $messages = [ 'error' => 'Invalid credentials.' ]; // Return the view return view('login', $messages); } } This works fine, when I submit the form with bad credentials I get a 'Invalid credentials' message. What I want to do is change this message to 'Invalid username or email', I have tried both changing the '|' and '|' and changing the parameters to be '|username' and '|email' respectively but the error message always stays the same. The code has been edited for my application, that might be the problem. Any suggestions? A: It seems that i did not set up the exception middleware so i just added: if
