So, what can we expect to see in Photoshop on the web? In early 2021, we'll be releasing a preview of Photoshop with the new new UI first, and then old UI should roll out until all products are updated. All features that are being worked on for the 2021 release are visible now in the latest Photoshop and Photoshop CC 2019 releases, so we've listed them out here to explain what you can expect to see in the web version rolling out soon. Adobe Photoshop will have its own tools designed to be even more powerful than those available in Photoshop Elements, like subtracting and using photo outlines or using smart shapes to predict where the next object in the image is, so you don't need to fuss around with adding new layers or adjusting other existing smart object layers. And with the range of options you'll see in the new UI and without layers, you'll also be able to combine features and turns out some pretty crazy and creative work. Alongside the new UI, you'll also be able to use many of the same image editing tools on mobile via the Adobe Photoshop mobile app to create images and edit vector graphics on your iPad, iPhone, or Android device, and access the same features available in the Photoshop desktop tools. It's amazing to be able to instantly alter and manipulate the look of any photograph or work of art. By using filters, or adding adjustment layers, you can change the colours, contrast, brightness, and create a number of other changes. Filters are perfect for creating an artistic effect or a simple brighten-up.
