A: Instead of using a long formula, you can use a single statement like this, =IF(OR(BA),0,INDEX(A:A,MATCH("WOW!",A:A,0))) The function OR(...) will return 1 or FALSE in your case and the function INDEX will return an array, and if you would give a FALSE as your value then the return value will be 0 etc. Теперь у вас все отлично, не забудьте накрыть метки. И напрямую назначить комит. Q: How does Controller's Save() method obtain the file id of the object being saved? When using Entity Framework, how does the Save() method for a Controller's action obtain the new file id of the object being saved? I can see the Entity Framework object's change tracker record the file id in the DbContext object, and upon calling SaveChanges() it runs through each DbSetEntry and checks the change tracker records to see which entity changed
