Usb Library Version 030207 and tagged with the "js" language is to provide a JavaScript runtime with a simplified object model, functions, asynchronicity, etc. This package in fact also implements NodeJS on top of V8. Apps written in JavaScript running on a NodeJS-powered server can benefit from numerous NodeJS libraries and APIs. The package explorer lists all the available versions of the npm packages along with their respective licensing, development, and other information: This package may be used in the development and testing of web pages and applications that contain either or both of the YouTube Data API and the Google Maps JavaScript API. If you do choose to go with the npm package, you must also download and install its dependencies (both visible and invisible): The pull request and issues are tracked with GitHub, so you will also need to have a GitHub account to sign the service ticket: The Service Ticket Finally, if you decide to finally pull the trigger and pay to get Google to consider your use case and security flaw as important, you'll need to buy a "service ticket". These may be processed in 8 or 24 hours depending on the availability, plus a handling time of a few hours. The time frame to get a ticket is under 24 hours. I still haven't received a reply yet, and the existing tickets have long since been closed. The time frame to get a ticket is under 24 hours.
