In order to disable the firmware password, open System Preferences and go to Security.Q: Can I use a smaller motor on the Arduino UNO I'm interested in getting a Moteino. I'm looking at getting the Servo one, which has a 2.8/5 motors, and the Arduino UNO, which has an ATtiny2313. Can I use the smaller motor in the UNO, and expect it to run and/or work at the same speed, but in this case be a lot easier to program? Would I run into any potential problems? I've got a lot of experience with smaller devices and don't want to get myself into any trouble. (This is a.NET C# application) A: The UNO has a 5V Bipolar power supply, so you will need a 5V to 3.3V DC level converter to power the motor. The ATtiny has an internal regulator, so it doesn't really need a converter for that kind of voltage range. Given the maximum current of an ATtiny, you'll want to either use a higher-power motor, or find a similar-performance motor with a higher current rating. Quizlet is probably one of the best tools available for vocabulary practice online. As the name suggest you can use it to create a vocabulary list and once you have done that you just need to click on any of the quiz options (words, words with definitions, definitions, sentences etc), speak your answers, and get a score. Among the best parts about Quizlet are that you can create your own vocabulary lists, and that you can easily share them with
